FIVE HUNDRED GREATEST ALBUMS OF ALL TIME
When was the golden era in music?
The 1960's is often regarded as a watershed in contemporary music with the emergence of rock & roll shaping our modern musical palette. With a glut of great albums released in the 60's and particularly in the 70's it could be suggested this is when the birth of modern music began.
However the correlation does suggest that as the 21st century approached, the consistency in which musicians produced iconic albums was strong up. Is this trend set to continue in the new millenium or will musical taste change to the degree in which our choices are different?
